FAIRFIELD CEMETERY
CR 12 & CR 13
Corunna, Indiana

OLD TOWNSHIP SECTION

In the past there has been no records of this section of the cemetery. Many of the stones over the past 125 yrs. have deteriorated and a few are not legible. In the summer of 1983 Jean, Cathy & Peter Reinoehl worked a long task of copying the information from these stones and also measured their location because the lots are not marked. A map of locations of stones was made and names transfered on a plat map obtained from county records. A card file was made and arranged alphabetically according to last names. From the card file this phamplet was prepared. I realize human error is possible and there may be some errors, however, the information is suppose to be exactly as it appears on the stones. Some of the spelling in those days was different than we consider common. There are a few stones that do not make much sense even though they were legible.

FAIRFIELD CEMETERY
COUNTY ROAD 12 & 13
CORUNNA, INDIANA
Inscription From Headstones 1999

This past winter and spring I copied inscriptions from all the stones in the Fairfield Cemetery and organized them in a pamphlet. Each of the six additions is arranged individually to help concentrate the location of any one stone. The fourth addition is divided because of it's large area and also its natural division with a drive east and west near the center. This pamphlet is printed somewhat in duplicate. The first part is in sequence as I went north and south, back and forth, copying inscriptions. In each addition I worked from west to east and numbered the rows except a few which were very short and near previously numbered rows. To find an individual stone, look for the name in the addition listing and then note the row number and stone name on either end of that row. If you know the stone you are looking for is near the west side, look first in the lower row numbers, if it is near the east side look first in the higher numbers.

The second part of this pamphlet is arranged alphabetically, again each addition separately. This was done so anyone looking for a particular name can find it quickly. This alphabetical arrangement was done by computer and therefor often separated families of the same name. By reviewing the first part written in sequence you can determine who is with who.

I would liked to have given more information in this alphabetical part as to location of individuals but there wasn't enough room. By breaking the cemetery down by additions, anyone can now find most any stone or information from a stone quite easily in minutes. This is, I believe, much easier and precise than folks wondering around in the cemetery at random, looking for a stone as I have seen on several occasions. There are quite a few people buried in the Fairfield Cemetery that do not have headstones and probably never will. For at least some of these people we can determine their burial in the cemetery from burial permits. We have a record of people who own lots but sometimes people are buried on someone elses lot. When I finished this project I had 2168 entries.

FAIRFIELD CEMETERY
COUNTY ROADS 12 & 13
CORUNNA, INDIANA
BURIAL PERMIT RECORDS 1999

Each burial is accompanied with a burial permit. The funeral director obtains the burial permit from the County Board of Health where the deceased died. At the cemetery a copy is given to the person in charge of opening and closing the grave. The funeral director also sends a completed copy back to the County Board of Health which first issued the permit.

When I received these burial permits, they were loose and thrown into a box. A few were tied together as to year or parts of a year but most were loose and in an order of disarray. A few winters ago, I sorted them all out and filed each year separate. I then filed them each year in an envelope and keep them in my safe. Now if I have a burial permit for anyone person I can find it in minutes.

I have on file burial permits from the 1920's to the present except for a few years. I went to the county records to get this information. I got some information but not all. I found the county records of permits themselves to be incomplete and in disarray. Their death certificates seem to be listed in a book quite well arranged and satisfactory. Death certificates and burial permits though similar are not one and the same. Of course if someone died out of the county the burial permit would be sent back to the county where the death occured and our county would not have it.

For the missing years, I also got information from the headstones. In the earlier burial permits it gave the cause of death but later this was dicontinued. For those that we have burial permits for, are definitely buried in the Fairfield Cemetery unless they have been removed to another cemetery, which is rare. If someone doesn't have a headstone, burial permits are another way to determine if they are buried in Fairfield Cemetery. I have made about 1620 entries but believe there are a few yet missing and know of no way to find them.
